

CHARTER FOR THE CITY OF DAYTON, TENNESSEE

Compilers Note: The currently effective act incorporating the City of Dayton is Chapter 229, Acts of the General Assembly of the State of Tennessee for 1903. That act, as set out in this compilation (sections 1-1--1-25), has all its currently effective amendments incorporated except for Chapters 46 and 267, Private Acts of 1953, which have been set out herein separately (section 2-1--2-35 and 3-1--3-8), and except for bond authorization acts which have already served their purpose and special assessment laws which are now substantially duplicated in the general law available to all cities. For historical reference, a list of all the private acts relating to the City of Dayton which have been passed since 1903 is included at the end of this charter.

Under the 1903 basic charter act the city originally had a governing body consisting of eight aldermen. In 1915 a three-member board of commissioners was substituted for the board of aldermen. In 1949, two additional commissioners were added. Then, in 1953, by two private acts of the General Assembly, a five-member city council was substituted for the board of commissioners and a city manager was added. Later, at a referendum in October of the same year, the city's voters elected to abandon its 1903 private act charter, as amended, and adopted instead the Uniform City Manager-Commission Charter as set out in the general state law. Thereafter the city operated under the general law charter, with a three-member commission and city manager, until 1968 when the voters elected to surrender the general act charter and revert to its previous charter, as amended, which now calls for the five-member council and city manager.

Therefore, at the present time, the city's charter is comprised of three basic acts, as amended: (1) the 1903 charter, (2) the amendment providing for the five-member city council and for its election, powers, duties, etc., and (3) the amendment providing for a city manager. These three acts, as amended, have been unofficially compiled herein as "the charter" of the city and unofficially designated as articles 1, 2, and 3 respectively. It will be noted that each section has two number designations. The first one, by the caption, is unofficial and designates the location of the section within this unofficial compilation. The other one is official and designates the location of the section within the official act of the legislature. For example, the first section is designated as "1-1" and also as "section 1." The "1-1" is unofficial and indicates article 1, section 1, in this unofficial compilation. The "section 1" is official and indicates section 1 of chapter 229, acts of 1903.

The official source of each section is reflected in the historical citation appearing at the end of each section. Unofficial article and section catchlines or captions, a table of contents, and numerous footnote cross-references have been added by the compiler to facilitate finding provisions in the charter.

This charter is current through the 2008 session of the Tennessee General Assembly.
